

February 2010: North Andover High School Students' Poetry

Lay your head down,
You're stuck in, you're trapped,
You can't get it open,
You're lost in the black.

Don't surrender,
You still have a prayer,
You still have your chances
Of freedom out there.

Let go of hopeless,
And let go of fear,
Because if you believe it,
Your escape is near.

By: Kelsey B.

-Caravan-

With a rat-a-tat-tat ran the caravan wheels,
With a magic trail left by at its heels,
A spoken tomorrow, a forgotten today,
A mystic reminder of what's on its way,
To look through the future, and see what's ahead,
None of us know what could ever be said.

By: Kelsey B.

-I remember you-

I remember,
How it felt when you went the other way,
You took the other passage, apart from me to stay,
I remember broken memories,
I remember rising suns,
I remember lights fading past until the shadows come.
How loneliness and loss,
Was replaced by smiling faces,
And I remember you, through all these different cases-

By: Kelsey B.

A Bellowing Echo,
Overtook the Land,
The Mightiest of sounds,
Brought forth by his hands.
The Fury of War Time,
Or the calling of friends,
Merely interpretation,
Of what the Music sends.

By: Kelsey B.

-New Sun-

A new sun was setting,
Across the ancient trees,
Illuminating colors,
Blowing in the breeze.
It happened before,
And it'll happen again,
But that won't quell the majesty,
The beauty, it brings.

~Kelsey B.